

Contributors

Edward Ashbee is associate professor at the Center for the Study of the Americas, Copenhagen Business School. His publications include US Politics Today (Manchester University Press, 2004) and articles on “paleoconservatism,” immigration policy, and multiculturalism. A recent essay in the Journal of Transatlantic Studies looks at the part played by perceptions of Scandinavia in the US same-sex marriage debate. His forthcoming book, The Bush Administration, Sex and the Moral Agenda will be published by Manchester University Press in October 2006.

Asbjørn Grønstad is postdoctoral fellow at the Department of Information Science and Media Studies, University of Bergen. He has published several articles on film theory and history and on filmmakers such as John Huston, Sam Peckinpah, Francis Coppola, and Jean-Luc Godard, and is co-editor of To Become the Self One Is: A Critical Companion to A Saloonkeeper's Daughter (Novus 2005). He is currently at work on the book Illicit Images: Contemporary Art Cinema and the Limits of Transgression.

Clara Juncker is associate professor of American literature at the University of Southern Denmark, where she directed the Center for American Studies from 1996-99. She has published widely on both sides of the Atlantic within the fields of 19th- and 20th-century American Literature, African American Studies, Southern Literature, Gender Studies, and literary theory. Her books include Through Random Doors We Wandered: Women Writing the South (2002) and Transnational America: Contours of Modern U.S. Culture (2004), co-edited with Russell Duncan. She is currently completing a book on Marilyn Monroe.

Rolf Lundén is professor of American literature at Uppsala University since 1986 and former dean of the university's language faculty. He has published books and articles on such American authors as Dreiser,

Baldwin, and Welty. His most recent book is The United Stories of America: Studies in the Short Story Composite (Rodopi 1999). He is currently at work on a book on episodic fiction and film and on a biography of a Swedish-American sculptor, David Edstrom.

Tuire Valkeakari holds a Ph.D. in English from the University of Helsinki (2004) and is currently a Ph.D. candidate in African American and American Studies at Yale University. She is completing a book tentatively titled Religious Idiom and the African American Novel, 1952-1998 (forthcoming, University Press of Florida, 2007). Her next project will examine representations of movement and migration in black Anglophone diasporic fiction. Her articles on American literature have appeared in Studies in American Fiction, Crossings, The Atlantic Literary Review, The Nordic Journal of English Studies, and in Canadian and Finnish essay collections.