

Contributors

Dag Blanck is an associate professor of history at the Swedish Institute for North American Studies at Uppsala University. He also serves as the director of the Swenson Swedish Immigration Research Center at Augustana College in Rock Island, Illinois. His current research interests focus on American immigration history and Swedish-American relations.

Mikael Börjesson is an associate professor in Sociology of Education, Department of Studies in Education, Culture, and Media, Uppsala University, and co-director of the research group Sociology of Education and Culture (SEC), Uppsala University. He is currently involved in the research projects Transnational Strategies within Higher Education: Sweden's Relations to France and the U.S., 1919-2009; The Science Programme within the Swedish Educational System; and The Art of Success in Art: Social Origin, Gender, Education, and Career 1945-2007.

Stephen Dougherty is an associate professor in the Department of Language and Literature at Volda University College, in Volda, Norway. His articles and essays on 19th and 20th century popular fiction and science writing have appeared in Configurations, Cultural Critique, Diacritics, and elsewhere.

Bo G. Ekelund is an associate professor at the Department of English, Stockholm University. The double focus of his research is on processes of recognition in the literary field and on scenes of recognition in contemporary narratives.

Gunlög Fur is professor of history at Växjö university, Sweden. She received her Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma in Native American History. She is the author of Colonialism in the Margins: Cultural Encounters in New Sweden and Lapland (Brill, 2006), and has published articles on colonial encounters and gender in North America and Northern Scandinavia.

Michael Madsen holds an MA in English from the University of Southern Denmark. He is currently a teaching assistant at the Aarhus School of Business and Aarhus University in Denmark where he teaches British and American history, society, and culture. He has reviewed American fiction in Danish and American publications and has published journalistic and academic work on Cormac McCarthy.

Andreas Melldahl is a Ph.D. student in the Sociology of Education at the Department of Studies in Education, Culture, and Media, Uppsala University. His thesis deals with the development of Swedish education in architecture. Since 2007, he has been a research assistant in the research group in Sociology of Education and Culture (SEC) at Uppsala.

Per Serritslev Petersen is professor emeritus of British and American Literature at Aarhus University, Denmark. His most recent publications include "9/11 and the 'Problem of Imagination: Fight Club and Glamorama as Terrorist Pretexts," "Don DeLillo's Cosmopolis and the Dialectics of Complexity and Simplicity in Postmodern American Philosophy and Culture," and "A Human Tortoise Crucified into Sex and Resurrection? D.H. Lawrence's Cosmopoetic Eroticism."

Peter Quigley has published articles on environmental ethics, Jeffers, Eliot, Snyder and others. He has been President of the Robinson Jeffers Association for the last three years. Currently, Quigley is Interim Vice Chancellor of Academic Affairs at the University of Hawaii where he is also a Professor of English. He is finishing a book about the political poetics of the sense of place called Poets in Place: Housing the Environmental Imagination.