

Preface

This issue of Copenhagen Papers in East and Southeast Asian Studies contains papers on aspects of economic, political and social developments in post-Mao China.

Most of the contributors conduct their research in the Center for East and Southeast Asian Studies, University of Copenhagen, and therefore the present volume to a large extent reflects the work being done in the Center. However, we have also included papers by Jørgen Delman, University of Århus, Erik Baark and Liu Suying, The Danish Technical University and Roskilde University, and Su Shaozhi who is currently at Marquette University. Ole Odgaard prepared his article in cooperation with Steen Folke and his post-graduate students Peter Fenger, Allan Jørgensen and Peter Milthers from the Institute of Geography, University of Copenhagen.

We would like to thank Inge Lund Hansen for her kind assistance in the editorial process. Gratitude is also due to the Faculty of Humanities, University of Copenhagen for support towards meeting the cost of this publication.
